The topic is very relevant; however, I would appreciate the authors explaining in more detail in the method section how the items were developed, if there was any pilot testing, and why they decided to use a Likert scale. They should explain the content validity, construct validity, and reliability of the test.

Explain why they did not use a WHO instrument.

It is suggested that they add a control group and a section on limitations of the study, and that the results be discussed in the context of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.
