

Review of: "Understanding on Social Utopia: West to East"

Retno Hanggarani Ninin<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Universitas Padjadjaran

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Based on the title, it seems that the author intends to compare Western and Eastern points of view regarding social utopia, choosing Tagore's point of view to represent the East and Rousseau's to represent the West. An analysis of the philosophical views of these two figures has been presented by the author. The message of comparing Western and Eastern social utopias will be more effectively conveyed if the systematic writing is presented by selecting the same features from both perspectives and the same order of discussion. The different features are explained afterwards. After that, a conclusion is needed that provides information about which things are highlighted by the author from the thoughts of each philosopher, and the differences in social utopia between the West and the East from the author's perspective.