The current review article is well written, but it seems that it needs changes in some parts.

1. The role of the plant in regulating the immune system has not been strongly discussed. It is better to use the new references that have been published in this field.
2. There are many topics that have been discussed; it would be better for the author to choose a few topics and discuss them in more detail. It would be better if the discovered signal transductions were used.
