

Review of: "Knowledge among Health care workers (HCWs) regarding biomedical waste management (BMW) during COVID-19 Pandemic"

Engracia Arceo¹

¹ Angeles University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study is a good attempt to explore the knowledge of HCWs on biomedical waste management. However, the overall manuscript lacks detail. Specifically, it needs improvement on the following:

Abstract: There is no introductory statement about the problem. It jumped right away with the objectives. It lacks specific data on the results (p-value)

Introduction: The authors failed to mention the existing problem on biomedical waste in the research locale. It is also suggested that the significance of the study be further explained, including the similarities and differences of the present study with existing literature.

Methodology, Results, and Discussion:

This entire section needs thorough revision. Many of its sections are not well explained. The authors simply enumerated their data without explanation leaving the readers with so many hanging questions.