

Review of: "If knowledge were simpler, we would all be wiser"

Andy Williams

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article was fascinating to me because I'm researching this precise topic (simplification), including how we might methodically go about it, and why it might be absolutely critical in the coming age of super-intelligent AIs that create ideas too complex to fit within the limits of human cognition. I enjoyed seeing a different perspective on the topic.