

Review of: "Remission of metastasis lymph nodes cancer arising from malignant ovarian tumor composed of prominent papillary architecture: A case study"

Yu Xie¹

¹ Fudan University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This article presented a case of using alternative medicine in treating ovarian cancer patients with metastasis.

This is an interesting case, however, there are several questions need to be mentioned before publication:

1. Regarding the therapy, should the patient receive oophrectomy rather than hysterectomy for ovarian cancer. Also , there is not detailed treatment plan for this patient.
2. This article aims to clarify the alternative medicine usage superiority comparing to previous treatment. However, is this treatment method being approved by ethic approval, i can't see this in the article.
3. The alternative medicine logic is not clarified and introduced enough in the article. Also in the discussion part. A more in depth literature review needs to be considered.
4. The treatment details of this patient is not sufficient, more histology and radiology photos needed.

Overall, the quality of this article is medium with the need of language improvement.