

Review of: "Grandparenting Children With Special Needs and Disabilities: A Narrative Review"

Luca Giacomelli

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I read with interest this narrative review by Dr. Venketesan on a quite neglected topic. Grandparents have a major role in the assistance of children with disabilities - and also assist parents and siblings. Hence, I think that the present paper can add to the knowledge in the field.

Some comments:

- The author claims this is a narrative review, but he used a PRISMA approach, which is used for systematic reviews.
- I understand that the relationship between GP and GC is dynamic, but the way it is presented in the paper is way too simplistic.
- Can the author provide the search strategy used?
- Can the author expand on his recommendations and visions?