To add clarity to the manuscript, in the introduction, before stating the research question, it is recommended for the author to add the research contexts and problem statements that trigger the study. The author should state explicitly the research gap that s/he wants to fill in by doing the study, what has been done and what has not been done related to ESP in Tunisian contexts, and then what the purpose of the study is.

In the method section, the author should add the research design and the sampling method, as well as the requirements of the participants. The description of the instruments should be provided, as well as information about the participants and how s/he analyzed the data systematically.

The results and discussions have been organized relevant to the research questions, but lack perspectives on how s/he sees the findings. The author can consider the "language teacher cognition framework" (Borg, 2006) as the perspective to direct the research. Hope that this review is useful. All the best with the revision.
