

Review of: "How Well Are We Protecting Human Research Subjects?"

Parisa Khani¹

¹ Shahid Sadoughi University of Medical Sciences and Health Services

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This article is suitable as a Commentary and highlights an important issue. It would be beneficial to elaborate on the existing metrics for measuring protections for human research subjects. While the article aims to emphasize the importance of evaluating criteria related to the protection of human subjects in research, it focuses more on the historical context rather than discussing evaluation metrics and the findings from related research.