Dear Authors, I appreciate your effort and time studying road traffic crashes in this developing country.

Despite the high number of fatalities and related risks in developing countries, there are inadequate studies regarding this issue, and your study provides valuable knowledge and data to fill this gap.

One of the significant shortcomings of the study is the methodology section. You should explain the methodology in detail; for example, it is unclear how many people were interviewed, and how you concluded that the number of interviews is enough. It is better to provide the questions or the questionnaires as an appendix for reviewers' review.

The provided discussion is not enough. You should substantiate your findings using previous studies. Since this is a review study, the discussion section must be the most substantial part of it. However, the authors failed to address this issue.

Provide a Limitations section and describe the limitations of your study in a separate section.

Good luck
