This manuscript entitled "The role of the gut microbiota in patients with Kleefstra syndrome" may be interesting, but some points need to be resolved.

1. In the lifestyle questionnaire, please give the volume of the glass for alcohol investigation.
2. About "intestinal complaints", I think this is an important indicator in this study. The authors offered 7 options in the questionnaire but simply coded them into 2 groups when data processing. I think this grouping method might be inappropriate. In future investigation, it might be more scientific that the authors ask the gastroenterologist for help to make the questionnaire of this part.
3. Figure 8, the title of x-axis, a wrong word of "total"
