Dear author,

This review of general information is a bit confusing. If you are examining families, you should give the same subheadings for all families. For example, a subtitle for one family does not exist for another. It says "larva" in four places in the text; replace it with "larvae."

I have never come across a compilation like this before. This is a somewhat interesting article. One of the reasons for this is that other studies under the title "Study" are unnecessary, in my opinion. If you think it is necessary, present these studies more briefly.

Best regards
