

Review of: "Life of Indigenous Communities During the COVID-19 Pandemic"

Piyoosh Singh

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

While the manuscript addresses important questions and relevant topics, it requires substantial revisions to be considered a scientific research manuscript. The introduction is excessively lengthy and contains a substantial amount of extraneous information. The manuscript requires significant revisions to improve clarity, particularly concerning the English language. Numerous sentences are excessively long and difficult to interpret, leading to confusion.

The Methods section lacks clear details on the study design, population, sampling, and data collection timeline.

The Results section is missing, and the Discussion does not align with the research objectives. The relationship between time and labor details and COVID-19 is not clearly articulated, and how they are correlated is not explained.

The authors have included unnecessary information without adequately addressing the research question.