Dear Authors,

Thank you for submitting your article "The Role of Women's Business Performance in Promoting Sustainable Development" for our review.

Women's significance in business and organizational performance's impact on societal and economic growth is needed. Recognizing that women are marginalized and that much is required to attain gender equality in industry. However, the issues presented in the article seem somewhat generalized and could apply to companies irrespective of who is in the realm. I suggest providing insights into the unique attributes or practices women bring into businesses compared to men and elucidating how these could potentially elevate business performance.

Is it correct to infer that the content of section 1.2 is universally relevant to all businesses?

Kindly provide clarity on the acronyms SMEs and MSEs. Are they references to micro and small-scale enterprises?

Additionally, please review and rectify any grammatical and spelling inconsistencies.

Lastly, the connection between women's business performance and the promotion of sustainable development remains ambiguous in your work. Could you provide a more in-depth understanding of your perspective on "sustainable development"?

Thank you for your attention to these points. I am looking forward to your revisions.
