The topic is interesting and promising. however, when reading the manuscript, it looks more like a report than an academic article with a structure reflecting academic standards, a research question, an objective, a contribution to theoretical development, on digital transformation and macro-economic implications (development) etc...

instead the manuscript is limited to a simple description and lacks academic rigour.

Even if the paper tends to develop a conceptual framework, there needs to be real research at the level of theoretical synthesis, a clear research question and a clear methodological description, with results, proposals and implications, both theoretical and empirical, and a more abundant reference list related to the subject, allowing the text to be academically defended.
