

Review of: "Attitude towards business activity risk: evidence using logit models for two groups of OECD countries"

Otilia Manta¹

¹ Romanian-American University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The authors present a relevant topic, namely entrepreneurship generated by needs, all the more since this is a multidisciplinary topic combining social and economic aspects. Moreover, the work has a multiplying effect given the fact that this theme is on government agendas at the global level. Although the authors present the aspects of originality/value, we suggest the authors of the paper highlight the innovative aspects specific to the groups of states in the context of the analyzed theme.

At the same time, we suggest the authors of the paper highlight as clearly as possible the limitations of the study, as well as future research in accordance with the study's theme.

We commend the research team for their chosen topic and suggest revising the study with these additional additions.