This is an interesting article that takes a non-medical approach to support people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The article could benefit from the following:

- More information on how participants for the intervention and control groups were recruited and selected,
- A discussion of the ethical issues that were considered, given that one group received the intervention and the control group did not. It would also be helpful to know what treatments were available to the control group,
- A more robust discussion of the findings will be useful, and
- A discussion of the limitations of this small-scale intervention would be beneficial.
