The abstract should be shorter, having just 2-3 sentences of introduction, goals, methodology and main results (250-300 words).

The structure of the article needs to be clarified. It should be a clear statement of the paper's goals or questions and a clear answer in the result part. The content should be reorganized because the methodology, results, discussion, and conclusion are not indicated, making it difficult to distinguish them.

In the Introduction, it would be better to avoid discussion with the literature; discussion is needed after the result. In the Literature Review, only statements of other authors are required, not a discussion either.

The manuscript needs a significant revision, but it raises a crucial topic.

It needs language improvement.

APA style is suggested in the biography.

The conclusion part is not a place for another discussion of the results.
