

Review of: "Challenges Faced by Parents and Stakeholder Perspectives on the Need for Hospital-Based Early Childhood Parenting Education Services"

Rukhsana Durani<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Allama Iqbal Open University, Pakistan

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

It is a good piece of work. This work addresses the real problems related to parenting and child care, especially in rearing a child. Although in the context of Pakistan there is a combined family system that claims to care for pregnant women, still in the majority of cultures this aspect is ignored, which affects maternal health. Next, there is not a tradition of regular institutions like in the West, where parents get training before planning a child. So in this scenario, when the research highlights the challenges, it is more effective. However, some areas may be improved, such as:

- 1- If the methodology section were divided into sections such as selection of subjects and research design.
- 2- The researcher should mention whether it is a case study or not.
- 3- The logic behind selecting different people in sampling, if explained, would make it easier for the reader.
- 4- Two sampling techniques are mentioned simultaneously: one is convenience and the other one is purposive. This needs to be justified.
- 5- In a phenomenological study, we investigate the phenomenon which is not known yet. Somewhere in the research design, it is mentioned that it is a phenomenological study, so which phenomenon was identified in this research?