

Review of: "How to burp an infant – a prospective comparative pilot study on four different methods"

Zhu Aiqun¹

¹ Central South University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This study is a good case report, not a prospective comparative pilot study. However, it provides some ideas for future prospective research, which can further explore burping methods with multiple samples from different infant populations.