

Review of: "Navigating the Skills Revolution: The Essential Role of Competence Frameworks"

Thomas Kurfess¹

¹ Georgia Institute of Technology

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper is a very informative review of skill competency levels within the modern workplace. By addressing critical skill sets such as entrepreneurship, digital capabilities, and problem-solving, the paper integrates more classical foundations of educational concepts with those necessary for advancing and success in the 21st century. However, the real beauty of the proposed approach is its flexibility to add new concepts and capabilities as they arrive in the future. It is a very interesting and well-written paper.