

Review of: "Cults and the LGBTQ Community: A Systematic Review Using PRISMA"

Adrián Sánchez Sibony¹

¹ Universidad Autónoma de Madrid

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Dear author,

Mainly, I would like to congratulate you on the research work presented. As a researcher on issues of sexual and gender diversity, I consider the topic of study to be very interesting and underexplored.

- Below, I provide you with my review:
- In the Introduction section, it is difficult to understand the research problem. It is necessary to delve deeper into it and define it in a way that readers have a clear understanding of the problem and the justification of the research method, as well as hypotheses about the solution or origin of the problem.
- In the Methodology section, it is necessary to better define the PRISMA method. Additionally, graphic resources such as diagrams that help visualize the process of article screening are missing. It would also be beneficial to include a table with the religious groups and cults and the articles found.
- Regarding the Discussion section, I would recommend expanding the synthesis of the results obtained with the research problems proposed at the beginning of the article. It is also necessary to include the obstacles that have arisen during the research, how they have been addressed, possible biases, and new lines of research or prospects.

Best regards,