Thank you for the opportunity to review this article.

This is a very relevant topic. The introduction has necessary and relevant details.

The cases were also well presented, however, the methodology though an observational and descriptive study, does not appear to be a cross-sectional study as suggested by the authors. This is more of an observational case series study. The review of clinical and epidemiological history and findings of seven cases at different times over a period of 3 months fits more into case series study than cross-sectional study. The authors may need to review this to improve the worth of the study.

All together, it is a good research work.
