The authors' topic is about citizenship in elearning which is interesting.

Comments:

-Introduction is not well written, it is written as a related work style.

- A starting statement in the begining of section related work is recommended before listing others work.

- At the end of related work, it is required to add a paragraph that show the difference between this research and others work.

- It is recommended to remove Sections: definition of terms, research questions and objective sections : a dd these definitions and content to the introduction

-The answers to the interview (for only 8 teachers) are analysed based on which type of analysis, it should be mentioned "narrative or deductive"

The results from the survey should be analyzed using a statistical analysis "not just a percetage "

-It is recommended to review the research and do a proofreading , there are some mistakes such as:

In related work " the editorial covered ". the correctness : the researchers covered

In methodology : "Mixed method approach integrating" should starts with "a" : A mixed method. or use "A hybrid method"

In recommendation section: The teaching methods, correct to : Teaching methods

Also "and" is used many times

There is an urgent need ; it should be: There is a urgent need"

In conclusion there is a redundancy in defining the concept. (rewrite the first paragraph)
