The article lacks a clear and specific motivation, with the abstract and content containing general statements rather than focusing on concrete facts and findings related to the subject matter. Rewrite the abstract.

2. This is like a mini-review.
3. In-depth explanations are required.
4. The introduction part must reflect the clear background of the study.
4. There is no proper methodology.
5. The manuscript does not generate intermediate conclusions based on presented facts. It is essential to connect the facts presented to their broader implications and provide intermediate conclusions to guide the reader through the research findings.
6. The manuscript contains many typographical errors, and the language usage could be improved for better clarity.
