Abstract:

- In the first paragraph, use behavior instead of "behaviour".
- In the first paragraph, use analyzing instead of "analysing".

Methods

- Please explain about Participants and Setting of your work in the Methods section.
- Address demographic and family characteristics such as age, gender, level of education, job, family size, and residence (in rural and urban areas).
- Address Statistical Analysis
- Add Ethics Section

Result:

- In the result section, you must clearly state the reports numerically. For example, in the paragraph below

Technology, particularly smartphones, plays a significant role in these incidents. Many of the events were captured on mobile devices, often shared on social media platforms, and sometimes even used as tools of intimidation or blackmail.

- Report the percentage or prevalence of events along with "Many of the events" and do the same for the word often.
- In the second column of Table 1, specify in which social media the reports were published. Please report the prevalence of the report in each social media separately in the results section
- The way of reporting results is not acceptable to me. You should write a detailed descriptive statistic of your reports in the results section.
- Move the last paragraph in the result section to the discussion section.
- In order to investigate the connection between smartphone-mediated violence and its subsequent sharing on social media, it is better to evaluate this relationship among different factors separately, including economic and social conditions, culture, mental health, and individual talent. You can use the article "Prevalence and motives of using social media among Iranian people" written by Maryam Chegani and improve the results section of your article.
