The author has submitted a review article on cytomegalovirus which is clear and concise. However it can be improved by including the methods followed in writing the review ; ie, the type of review, methods of literature search etc. Most of the references cited are old and there are very few papers referenced which have been published in the last 10 years. This review can be substantially improved by citing recent research. Some of the words used in the text appear to be rather colloquial (such as 'kids') should be changed to more formal language (ie, 'children').
