

Review of: "Challenge in Old People Care in Nursing Homes during COVID-19 Pandemia: Role of Nurses"

María Pilar Tudela-Vázquez<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Universidad de Granada

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Having read this article I will outline some of the issues that need to be reviewed in order for it to be considered for publication:

- In general terms this article needs a lot more work in terms of its relevance at the present time
- The objectives of the article are not clear, and the length is rather short for an academic article.
- A study methodology is not presented.
- There is no analysis of results.
- It is interesting to present what is the relevance of the proposals for the present post-pandemic moment.
- Language used is not very technical and is outdated. For example: old people should be referred as the elderly

The article raises a very interesting and necessary context of analysis to understand what happened during the pandemic and the measures that at the present time could be adopted from a preventive position.