Congratulations to the Authors for this article which provides new information especially regarding the young age of the sample examined.

It is definitely suitable for publication after some modifications.

The title should be more centered.

There is a little confusion about the definition of metabolic syndrome: dyslipidemia is already included in the syndrome.

The Authors talk about the seventh city: what does it mean?

Nutritional intake is not explained.

There is a lot of confusion in the tables: it would be appropriate to resize them.

Is it possible to divide the anthropometric measurements into age groups, given that these are subjects still in the growth phase?

In the References section, what does "a, b" mean in front of some references?
