Dear authors, the topic of your work is very interesting; nonetheless, I found that you can improve your research, including the determination of antioxidant activity by different methodologies such as DPPH, FRAP, among others. Because of this, in my opinion, your results can't be compared to studies already performed due to a lack of information. In your discussion, you start the paragraph mentioning superfoods that have antimicrobial properties, but there is no assay in your work for such a statement.

Best regards
