I appreciate your efforts in crafting this paper. While I acknowledge the work done, I believe there is significant room for improvement. The current narrative lacks a clear conceptual framework. Initially, the author introduces the use of cane juice and grapes, but the subsequent paragraph delves into vector control and introduces CINVESTAV. To enhance the paper's focus, it would be more fitting for the author to concentrate on the therapeutic treatment itself. I suggest a more detailed exploration of the discovery, mechanism, and effects of the treatment, as well as any relevant clinical intervention. This adjustment will contribute to a more cohesive and impactful paper.
