Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

- The researcher needs to start with a background information about trauma and Jung's theory.
- The methodology needs to be stated in the introduction. It is unclear to readers how the study cases were selected.
- The problem of the paper is unclear.
- The thesis statement must state the research problem right after the background is presented.
- There are some language problems (structure). Some sentences need to be rewritten.
- I believe that it is necessary to refer to Cathy Caruth's theory on trauma, as it is vital for this study.
