The study is scientifically sound and interesting. That said, here are some of the comments I suggest should be incorporated/ corrected in the final paper.

In the abstract, it is better to say "general objective" rather than "general aim."

It is better to say "conclusion" rather than "conclusions."

In addition, it would be better if the authors included recommendations in the abstract.

In the literature review,

The references are somewhat outdated; try to include recent studies.

"Study area" is more preferred than "study site."

What does "research study" mean? Does it refer to study design?

The results and discussion parts are well written.
