

Review of: "We Don't Have a Health Problem, We Have a Village Problem"

Kasarachi Omitiran¹

¹ National Primary Health Care Development Agency, Abuja, Nigeria

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Some might view this topic as controversial, but it is highly relevant to the discourse on social determinants of health. The author argues for increasing recognition of communities as units of care with the ability to enable health for themselves with locally available assets using a bottom-up approach.

The author has not explained the role of governance and coordination, which is crucial to the outcomes he argues for.

- I would like to see a description of how the ABCD approach will be coordinated. Can you provide examples of how governance and coordination have successfully impacted community health outcomes?
- I would also like to see the linkages he proposes to existing governance structures, as communities do not exist in silos. What specific recommendations can you offer for integrating community efforts with existing governance structures?