

Review of: "An Analysis of Pharmaceutical Inventory Management at a Leading Teaching and Referral Hospital in Kenya"

Fernando Antoñanzas¹

¹ Universidad de La Rioja

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

It is an interesting text about how drugs are managed in a county hospital in Kenya. It read through well. Authors describe quite well the different drug classes grouped according to different international criterion. However, a part describing the purchasing policy of drugs in that hospital is missing.

My main comment is that after reading the text, some lessons should be presented so that the management of drugs could be improved. It can be a part of the discussion or just included at the concluding remarks. Authors are in a very good position after having written the article to propose some measures. For instance, other stock management strategies, procurement policies, etc. that would be helpful to improve the efficiency of the hospital/healthcare system and the availability of drugs to clinicians so that they can better treat their patients.