

Review of: "Gumbel's Extreme Value Distribution for Flood Frequency Analyses of Timis River"

Nevil K. Trambadia¹

¹ Gujarat Technological University Ahmedabad

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Gumbel's recurrence interval method is used frequently in hydrological studies. What is the uniqueness in the study that proved to be a research?

The river system in the study area is not well defined, whereas the boundaries of the region and other used data need to be depicted in the article.

The terrain map needs to be shown for any flood frequency analysis. Here, the author has only utilized statistical data.