

Review of: "The Universal Accessibility Provisions in Educational Institutes of New Delhi, India"

Varsha Patil

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article titled "Review of: The Universal Accessibility Provisions in Educational Institutes of New Delhi, India" is useful for the NEP 2020 implementation to policymakers from different perspectives. Very first perspective is nonresponse from the organisation to Right to information (RTI 2005 act), In urban area(Delhi) only 14 organisation out of 27 organizations (to whom authors approached) responded. The methods for followup of organisations are well documented in flowchart of research methodology. In questions sent to organisation for information on rights of persons with disability the questions are appropriate. Further organisation may add appendix of assistive technologies used. The article is well written. The authors have done analysis of 14 received responses. The article requires few suggestions from the authors for welfare and effective implementation of the acts mentioned in the document.