People find it difficult to accept the idea that every natural phenomenon is a manifestation of one form or another of consciousness. The reason for this rejection is a lack of understanding of the essence of consciousness. Consciousness is a self-organized vibration. Since everything is vibration, self-organized to one degree or another, then everything is conscious to one degree or another. Vibration is dual in its latent state, since it represents a periodic change in complementary qualities. Neutrality corresponds to a lack of manifestation. For effective manifestation or action, a Triad is needed, which gives polarity (gender) to consciousness. Nevertheless, modeling the manifestation of consciousness as an action composed of dual pairs of quantum fields is not a bad idea, if only because such an idea will give readers the opportunity to reflect on the vibrational essence of consciousness.
