Overall, the article is good and worth to read. However, there are some typing errors as well as grammatical errors in the article. Thus I would like to suggest the author to send the article for proofread.

For the demographic characteristics of the respondents, it would be better if the author present it in a table rather than in sentences. It will be more convenience to read.

There are 25 items in the survey, however the author only discussed the finding of the first three items. I would like to suggest the author to categorized the items into their own category and discussion on the finding is made based on the category, not based on each items. And it is also seems like there is a hanging sentence before Table B.
