

Review of: "Tourists' Activities and their Impacts on Chinhoyi Caves Heritage Site, Zimbabwe"

Antonio di Campli

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

the text is written in a clear and orderly manner. the references to the literature on the tourist phenomenon, and in particular on the relationship between tourist use of places and instances of heritage protection is adequate. however, the text reads more like a summary of a research thesis than a scientific article. a re-writing of the article, less standardised and focusing on a few key points or problems, is therefore suggested. in the conclusions it is suggested to expand the part concerning the definition of innovative policies for the management and tourist governance of places, starting from the issues that emerged from the survey carried out. it is suggested it would be useful to include pictures or maps of the place under investigation.