The topic of the article is captivating, and the paper has potential. Nevertheless, the article proposed by the author is too general. The authors should rephrase the abstract and move part of the text from the abstract to the Introduction. The abstract ought to contain the Background and objectives, Methods, Results, and Conclusions. The manuscript should mention in section 2 the keywords used in the literature survey and the databases the authors used to prepare this manuscript. Each of the subsections of Section 3 should present more detailed information, like case studies. It would be good to include tables with information about the cohort, the purpose of the research, and the methodologies utilised in the case studies. Moreover, subsection 3.3 ought to provide information about the peril of vaccination. You could use, for example, those: <https://doi.org/2021.02.08.21251366>, <https://doi.org/10.1016/j.ajp.2022.103129>. You should also discuss more profoundly the subsection from Section 4.
