

Peer Review

Review of: "Christ Bearing the Cross: The Original Antigenic Sin of the Immune System and Its Potential Role in Emerging Diseases"

Hany Akeel Al-hussaniy<sup>1</sup>

1. University of Baghdad, Iraq

The manuscript provides a well-written and intellectually engaging overview of original antigenic sin and its relevance to emerging infectious diseases. The conceptual discussion is strong, but the scientific impact would improve by reducing the length of the narrative introduction and expanding mechanistic immunological explanations and clinical implications.

Reviewer Comment for Editor

This manuscript is scientifically credible, clearly written, and relevant to ongoing discussions about immune memory and vaccination strategy. The article is suitable for publication following minor revisions focusing on scientific depth and structural balance.

Declarations

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.