Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I consider the subject to be extremely interesting and important, however I believe that in this article, the full potential has not been explored, as only the statement is made that there is such a problem as the presentation of Cushing's syndrome secondary to herbal treatments.

Perhaps it would be important to do a more in-depth analysis that includes numbers and statistical data to add educational and scientific value to this article.

That being said, it is somewhat easy to read, although it would change the writing style a bit and it provides a small overview of this problem, making it a relevant article and leaving you with the initiative to read more on the subject.
