

Review of: "Online learning during the COVID-19 pandemic, lessons learned and what's next?"

Dr ANAND SHANKAR RAJA Manivannan¹

¹ Christ University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The authors have to look at the developing countries across the globe which suffered due to the Covid-19 pandemic. For example, India, is a country with world's second largest population. India has not developed 100% like the United States of America or China with digital literacy. There are many rural villages in these developing/under developed countries which have no access to electricity. In this regard, rural population who do not have any knowledge about computers and internet connection are not considered. Henceforth, this is one of the aspect which has to be explored. In addition, the psychology of the respondents (Academic fraternity) who were into online education would have a lot to share through their experience. It is important to consider their state of mind and mental conditions. However, few other data collection methods and analysis can be incorporated.