The article aims to be a literature review on emergencies. The approach is interesting, but it lacks a profound methodological reflection, merely relying on some bibliographic and non-bibliographic references.

It is necessary to delve into the research and highlight, for each identified publication, the contribution it has made to research in its scientific field.

Regarding research centers, it is essential to explore their contributions to the understanding of emergencies. All research centers need to be identified, and their projects described.

Concerning the "Disaster Cycle," it would be beneficial to refer to some application examples.
