Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Am in support of the gained insight of the authors that there is a close correlation between activities and spending time at the chosen destination, with respect to digital nomadistry and Greece as organic space for this kind of remote labor and even entrepreneurship. In this sense, there is already a market competition of several countries for highly qualified nomads, with special work/life packages. I would like to add that the achieved tech-know-logical standard of ICT (information and communication technology) and digital technology infrastructure of a country plays also an eminent role in the choices of digital nomads; the quality of health care must also be mentioned here, in terms of prolonged staying and eventually permanent residence.
