Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study needs a methodology section.

Readers might wish to know who the teacher in the study is since no profile of that person is being discussed.

The direct citation of Merizow in the introduction needs year and page number and a reference in the end.

The work needs to contain more citations. The sentence before the conclusion that says the authors' child was accepted into Harvard. One wonders what the content of this citation has to do with the study.

There needs to be relevant literature showing the gap in the field. One needs to see connection between the study and the discourse.

There should be a statement showing what the study contributes to the field.
