

Review of: "[Mini Review] Viburnum: an overview in relation to risks of allergy"

Ila Shukla

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Review points for the given article are as follows:

The given mini-review underscores the multifaceted nature of the Viburnum genus and its potential contributions to agriculture, medicine, and overall human health.

The review is rich enough to provide potential allergy risks associated with Viburnum species; individuals can take precautions when handling or planting these plants, especially if they have known sensitivities or allergies to certain plant allergens.

Although I know it is a mini-review, in my opinion, the given review can become better if a few more plants with high medicinal and economic importance are included with crisp information about the allergic properties of plants.