Firstly, the paper needs thorough editing for grammar, clarity, and accuracy.

The abstract should be informative, giving readers a quick overview of your study's purpose, methods, and most importantly, the results and conclusions.

The introduction is weak and requires references from authors to substantiate some of the assertions made. In this section, it is necessary to show how the article is structured.

The Theoretical Framework and Research Hypothesis is not well-structured and needs to include recent studies.

In the methodology, more details and information about the sample size and sampling technique used in the study are needed.
