I would like to suggest you to be little precise and crisp with the language and the formation of sentences. Besides, at one place I read Pondichery named as state. It is not a state, so accordingly I would suggest you to change that and also represent the same change in the diagram showing states. Its not a major thing But I would also guide your attention to phrasing the whole article in a chronological order, i.e. if you are describing conventional techniques first, write about it and then follow it up with the other sustainable techniques. Better not to mix up all.
